

The FCC shouldn't implement any proposal to lessen Indiana's Tele- phone Privacy law protections.

I used to receive around 4-10 calls per day. I pay extra to keep my telephone number unlisted so that I won't be bothered. However, a marketer can call every telephone number listed for my area and still bother me. Is it harassment when an individual calls you 3 or more times and you don't know that person or want them to call you? How many businesses are there in the U.S.? How many calls could a household receive in any given day?

I work 3rd shift and have to listen for the answering machine. One example would be when my son's school called because he fell on his hand and I had to take him to get it x-rayed. Telmarketers aren't supposed to leave a message on your machine but they sometimes do. Their auto call system calls first to see if anyone answers and if my answering machine activates, it sends out a loud Burrrrr, Burrrrr, Burrrr, Burrrr, Burrrr, Burrrr, Burrrr, Burrrr! It is impossible to sleep through that, unless you sleep with a high quality set of ear plugs.

May I please have the right to privacy.
